Enhanced Oil Resources is a development stage, enhanced oil recovery (EOR) company that controls approximately 200,000 acres of land within the St. Johns Helium/Co2 field in Arizona and New Mexico. The Company is developing what is thought to be the largest undeveloped resource of helium and carbon dioxide gases in North America. Independent engineering firms have estimated the St John's field contains approximately 15 trillion cubic feet of in place carbon dioxide resources with a potential recoverable resource of 5 trillion cubic feet. The Helium resource is estimated to be 66 billion cubic feet with a potential recoverable of 33 billion cubic feet. Development of the project could result in the Company becoming one of North America's largest Helium and CO2 suppliers and EOR producers. The Company's strategic focus for Co2 delivery and EOR production is the Permian Basin where significant potential exists for enhanced oil recovery from mature, depleted oil fields.
